Executive Director-Comptroller

Colonel White:

The attached summary of significant changes in the regulations governing emergency planning activities (Tab A) is forwarded for your information. This proposal is now being coordinated with the Deputy Directors. You may be particularly interested in paragraph 4 as it represents a modification in the responsibilities of the Deputy Directors for preparing detailed emergency evacuation plans for Headquarters Building. Also, paragraph 5 makes explicit the Deputy Directors responsibilities for other more substantive aspects of emergency planning activities.

SUBJECT: Summary of Significant Changes in the Regulations Governing Emergency Planning Activities [] now with 25X1
Deputy Directors for coordination.

- 25X1
1. In the interests of clarity and logic, the contents of [] 25X1
[] have been recast into one paragraph, "CIA Emergency Planning and Implementation." The bulk of the material has been greatly reduced, and unnecessary details and duplicative information have been omitted. The new, single paragraph is divided into three parts; the first deals with various aspects of planning for emergencies, the second deals with the implementation of these plans, and the third deals with personal planning for emergencies.
 2. The CIA Emergency Planning Officer's responsibilities have been limited to relocation planning and CIA liaison with Office of Emergency Preparedness and Office of Civil Defense. Formerly, he was charged jointly with Office of Security and Directorate Building Emergency Officers with developing detailed emergency, relocation, evacuation, and training programs. Also, information regarding Agency relocation has been updated to delete references to [] [] emergency contact procedures, and reference to Office of Civil Defense publications on personal planning for emergencies has been updated.
 3. The Director of Security has been given the primary responsibility for developing detailed building emergency evacuation plans for Headquarters Building and rendering technical guidance to Building Evacuation Officers in the preparation of such plans for other buildings in the Washington, D.C. area.
 4. The Deputy Directors have been relieved of responsibilities for preparing detailed emergency evacuation plans for Headquarters Building. They retain responsibility for appointing Senior Emergency Evacuation Officers who will appoint and maintain current emergency rosters of building evacuation personnel and ensure, under the staff guidance of the Office of Security, that the evacuation personnel are properly briefed in the implementation of evacuation plans.
 5. The new regulation also makes explicit, the previously implicit responsibilities of the Deputy Directors for other more substantive aspects of the Emergency Preparedness Program for which the Agency is responsible under President Nixon's Executive Order 11490 dated 30 October 1969. These responsibilities require the development of plans to provide for the orderly continuation of the essential mission and functions of each Directorate in the case of emergency relocation and shall include provisions for the automatic assignment of responsibilities, designation of an emergency relocation task force, and maintenance of a vital records program to ensure deposits of essential records at our relocation site [redacted]. The foregoing does not represent a change in the Deputy Directors' current responsibilities, but merely an explicit statement of what they have been and continue to be.

40. CIA EMERGENCY PLANNING AND IMPLEMENTATION. This paragraph provides policy for the development and publication of plans of action to be taken during any emergency situation which might affect the normal operation of the Central Intelligence Agency. Responsibilities are assigned for the preparation and coordination of CIA emergency plans, and procedures are established for implementation of these plans.

a. PLANNING. Emergency plans will provide for the orderly continuation of Agency operations during any emergency or disaster. The plans will include provisions for the automatic assignment of responsibilities, designation of alternate physical locations for headquarters, protection of Agency personnel, and safeguarding of CIA classified material and property.

(1) The CIA Emergency Planning Officer is responsible for

(a) developing and preparing overall Agency emergency relocation plans;

(b) coordinating emergency relocation plans prepared by the Deputy Directors and Heads of Independent Offices (as provided for in subparagraph a(3)(a) below) within the Agency and with other agencies of the Federal Government;

(c) developing appropriate methods for the dissemination of emergency relocation plans.

(2) The Director of Security is responsible for

(a) preparing and disseminating detailed emergency evacuation plans for Headquarters Building and rendering technical guidance to the Building Evacuation Officers in the preparation of such plans for other buildings in the Washington area.

(1) ENEMY ATTACK

- (a) In the Washington Metropolitan Area there is only one warning signal: ATTACK WARNING. It means take shelter immediately. The signal itself is a 3 to 5 minute wavering sound on the sirens, or a series of short blasts or whistles, horns, or other devices, repeated as deemed necessary. If you should hear the ATTACK WARNING signal go immediately to a public fallout shelter or to your home fallout shelter. Turn on a radio, tune it to any local station that is broadcasting, and listen for official instructions being broadcast. All Agency employees will follow these instructions except those who are directed to do otherwise by the Agency.

(b) All Agency employees are encouraged to obtain a copy of In Time of Emergency, a citizens handbook on nuclear attack and natural disasters published jointly by the Department of Defense and the Office of Civil Defense. In Time of Emergency will be made available through Building Evacuation Officers.

(c) The Agency has a very personal interest in the welfare and safety of all the members of the family of each employee; nevertheless, the basic responsibility for planning and preparation for a civil defense emergency rests with the head of the family. In carrying out this responsibility, the head of the family should select definite rendezvous points, such as the homes of relatives at a distance from the Washington area, which would be the ultimate destination of family members following the declaration of a civil defense emergency. Planning along these lines should be discussed thoroughly with the members of the family so that they will understand and act accordingly.

(2) OTHER EMERGENCIES. In case of fire, explosion, riot, natural disaster, or any type of emergency which imperils the Agency personnel and facilities during duty hours, all employees should (1) follow the guidance provided in the posted notices governing action in case of fire and in all other applicable

1. As indicated in item 5 of the summary of significant changes in referent revision of the Emergency Planning regulations (attached) the Deputy Directors have been relieved of responsibility for preparing detailed building emergency evacuation plans. The old regulation, [REDACTED] (dated 1 April 1961), required the Deputy Directors to appoint Building Emergency Officers from their Directorates and gave them the responsibility for the development, publication and execution of detailed emergency plans for the evacuation of personnel under their jurisdiction to areas of safety. The revised regulation delegates the responsibility for preparing the Headquarters emergency evacuation plans to the Director of Security, thus relieving the Directorates of this burdensome task. The Directorates retain responsibility for appointing Emergency Evacuation Officers who are to implement plans developed by the Office of Security.

2. The new regulation also states the Deputy Directors responsibilities for other more general aspects of the Emergency Preparedness Program for which the Agency is responsible under President Nixon's Executive Order 11490 dated 30 October 1969. These responsibilities require the development of plans to provide for the orderly continuation of the essential mission and functions of each Directorate in the case of emergency relocation and shall include provisions for the automatic assignment of responsibilities,
